Moreover, in the logistic regression analysis, the elevated risk of cognitive impairment was significantly higher in women with hypertension than in men with hypertension. The gender differences in the association between hypertension and cognitive impairment may be attributed to the physiological differences between men and women. A number of studies have reported that in both men and women, arterial stiffness is associated with cognitive impairment \[[@CR4], [@CR13], [@CR17], [@CR20], [@CR24]\]. While vascular impairment in the elderly is attributed to the effects of cardiovascular risk factors such as high blood pressure, hypercholesterolemia, diabetes mellitus, and smoking, it was found that high blood pressure and hypercholesterolemia are associated with cognitive impairment in women \[[@CR5]--[@CR8], [@CR13
